Air accidents take toll on Boeing earnings

New York, The fatal Boeing 737 accidents in March and October have taken a toll on the US aeronautics giant with a 13 per cent drop in net earnings, the company announced on Wednesday. There was a fall in earnings in the first quarter of the year, in which the company had allocated an additional billion dollars to the production costs of its controversial 737 MAX model, the Efe news reported. The economic results were the first for Boeing since the international prohibitions of its 737 Max 8 and 9 after accidents in Indonesia and Ethiopia that caused 346 deaths. Boeing announced net earnings of $2.15 billion, 13 per cent less than the $2.48 billion achieved in the first three months of 2018. Core operating earnings fell by 21 per cent from $2.51 billion in 2018 to $1.99 in 2019. Quarterly revenues also fell two per cent, from $23.38 billion recorded between January and March 2018 to $22.92 billion in the same period of 2019, as a result of the most serious crisis for Boeing in almost two decades. These revenues were a little below the $22.98 billion estimated by analysts of the firm Refinitiv. Boeing also reported that its net profit per share between last January and March was $3.75, 10 per cent less than the $4.15 obtained in the first three months of the previous year. A figure that did coincide with analysts' expectations. With the results announced, the company's shares rose 1.2 per cent to $378.36 in the half session of Wall Street. On March 1, its shares reached $440.62, but after the accident of the 737 MAX in Ethiopia on March 10 and the subsequent bans on flying these models, the values reached a minimum of $362.17 on March 22. The company said that the results announced on Wednesday reflect the "lower deliveries of models 737" and that they were "partially compensated by a greater volume in (the sections) of defence and services". Their Global Services also registered an increase, this time of 17 per cent, from $3.95 billion in 2018 to $4.62 in the first three months of 2019. In the presentation of results, the company focused its efforts on launching reassuring messages about the evolution of the changes it is introducing in its 737 MAX ships to increase its security. In a statement, it insisted that "Boeing is making steady progress on the road towards a final certification for a software update for the 737 MAX, with more than 135 test flights and produc-

"Yesterday night at Delhi when an engineer was doing routine technical examination of an empty aircraft (777) APU auto shut down took place," the airline said in a statement. "Airport fire personnel observed black fumes from the APU exhaust and believing it to be a fire hazard sprayed APU and part of the fuselage with foam spray. ### NASA planning asteroid impact exercise next week

Washington, Aimed at effective disaster management, NASA and its international partners are planning to participate in an exercise that will play out a realistic — but fictional — scenario of an asteroid on an impact trajectory with Earth. The scenario begins with the fictional premise that on March 26, astronomers "discovered" a NEO they consider potentially hazardous to Earth. After "a few months" of tracking, observers predict that this near-Earth object (NEO) - dubbed 2019 PDC - poses a 1 in 100 chance of impact with Earth in 2027 (in real life, the international community has decided that a 1 in 100 chance of impact is the threshold for action). Participants in this exercise will discuss potential preparations for asteroid reconnaissance and deflection missions and planning for mitigation of a potential impact's effects, NASA said. Scientists believe that these exercises can help people in the planetary defence community to understand what those on the disaster management side need to know.

Nalco challenges Odisha HC's order favouring Vedanta

New Delhi, By Amiya Kumar Kushwaha The National Aluminium Co Ltd (Nalco) has moved the Supreme Court challenging the Odisha High Court judgement allowing Vedantas Jharsuguda unit to participate in the tender floated by Nalco for the sale of surplus alumina. Public sector enterprise Nalco, in its special leave petition, said that as per the policy, the tender for export of alumina was issued only to overseas customers and, therefore, Vedanta could not be registered with Nalco. It also told the court that in 2005 Nalco, after considering various circumstance, decided to sell alumina overseas. Nalco is a leading producer of low-cost metallurgical grade alumina in the world and the commodity produced is used to meet its requirements to produce primary aluminium at smelter. The surplus alumina is sold to third parties in the export market. But Nalco has rejected Vedanta's plea for participating in tender for the sale of alumina, observing that Vedanta Ltd was established under the Special Economic Zone (SEZ) statute. However, Nalco said that Vedanta could participate in the tender, if interested, through its sister concern company based in London. Aggrieved by the decision, Vedanta moved the Odisha High Court which allowed the company's Jharsuguda unit to participate in the tender. The Odisha High Court
